

The FCC is failing in its role to represent the American public if it allows Sinclair Broadcasting to air political advertising for one presidential candidate without providing equal time to the other candidate.

American government bodies such as the FCC increasingly appear to act in order to serve corporate interests instead of remembering the individuals that they were created to serve. This is a mistake. Your power derives from these individual people. If you continue to favor corporations over individuals, one day you won't have the power to say no to them anymore. You'll just be taking orders.

The FCC has a very important role to play in defending democracy. Please do it, not just for us, but for those of you there, no matter what your political persuasion.
